

If an operator uses conventional ethanol as a processing aid for extraction of beta-glucan from oat bran, can the product be labeled 'made with 100% organic' if there is no ethanol or other substance left in the final product? Would that be a misleading label if it can be labeled that way?

Yes, it would be misleading. To be labeled "100 percent organic," all processing aids must be organic. See 205.301.
